

MIDWIVES – ANTENATAL, LABOUR, DELIVERY AND POSTNATAL CARE

Region Gävleborg

Region Gävleborg is looking for six licensed midwives to join its maternity and women's health services in Hudiksvall, Gävle and Bollnäs!

- The services cover pregnancy care, birth and postnatal care, as well as gynaecology, across three locations in Gävleborg. Every year, the teams care for around 2,000 pregnant women during pregnancy and support around 2,100 births.
- Midwives work closely with doctors, nurses and assistant nurses in caring, hands-on teams, always keeping the mother and baby's needs at the centre of care.
- Depending on location, the role includes pregnancy check-ups, cervical screening, and care during labour, birth and the postnatal period, with some rotation between wards and clinics.
- The department works closely with neonatal care to keep parents and babies together as much as possible, and is planning new, modern facilities in both Hudiksvall and Gävle to bring pregnancy, birth and newborn care even closer together.
- The team is proud of its results, its supportive spirit and its commitment to helping colleagues grow. Every new midwife gets a personal introduction and a mentor, and the department is actively growing its workforce to create more room for learning and development.

Requirements

- A valid licence as a midwife.
- For labour and delivery roles, at least two years' experience in that area.
- A responsible, flexible team player who cares about person-centred care.

Salary and Conditions

- No on-call duties.
- Ongoing training and development opportunities, including up to five development days a year.
- Once the candidate's Swedish licence is in place, an individual salary applies, starting at a minimum of SEK 35,900 per month. (During any Swedish language training from B2 to C1 level, the candidate is employed as a nursing assistant at SEK 33,000 per month.)
- Two references from the candidate's most recent managers are requested.

ABOUT THE CLINIC

Region Gävleborg's maternity and women's health services are delivered across three sites — Hudiksvall, Gävle and Bollnäs — covering antenatal care, labour and delivery, postnatal care, and gynaecology, including gynaecological oncology. Together, the services support around 2,000 pregnant women through antenatal care and around 2,100 births each year, alongside around 1,500 cervical screenings annually. Care is delivered through close teamwork between doctors, midwives, nurses and assistant nurses, with a strong focus on person-centred, high-quality care and keeping mother and baby together.

In Hudiksvall and Gävle, the obstetric service comprises Labour, Delivery and Postnatal Care, serving a combined catchment area of around 280,000 residents. Around 80 employees work at the Hudiksvall site and around 120 at the Gävle site, with low staff turnover. Midwives rotate between the delivery ward, the postnatal ward and the postnatal outpatient clinic, with some structural differences between the two sites. The service works closely with Neonatal Care to reduce separation between parent and baby, and new care facilities are planned in both Hudiksvall and Gävle to bring delivery, postnatal and neonatal care together under one roof.

In Hudiksvall and Bollnäs, the Antenatal Care Clinics provide pregnancy care, reproductive health/STI care and gynaecological cell sampling to women across Hälsingland, serving a catchment area of around 165,000 residents. Some clinics are co-located with family centres, and midwives work closely with women's healthcare, child and family health services and primary care. Around 20 employees work across the antenatal service in Hälsingland, supported by a dedicated maternal health unit made up of a coordinating midwife, an antenatal care physician and a psychologist.

Across all sites, the department offers a forward-looking, development-oriented working environment with strong results and a close-knit team spirit. New colleagues receive an individual introduction and mentorship, and staff have access to ongoing training, including up to five professional development days a year. The department is actively growing its workforce to create more room for learning and development.

Gävleborg Region

Gävleborg is a region in central Sweden with a long tradition of innovation and world-leading industries, good regional and international accessibility, and a good quality of life. The county lies on the Baltic coast, with good access to Stockholm (90 minutes by train) and the rest of the country.

Gävle, the largest city and capital of Gävleborg, is a charming coastal city that combines Scandinavian character with a welcoming atmosphere. Surrounded by forests, parks and waterfront areas, it offers a good balance between city life and nature, a rich cultural life, historic wooden architecture and a strong sense of community.

Hudiksvall, further north on the Bothnian coast, is a historic town known for its well-preserved wooden old town, "Fiskarstan". Surrounded by archipelago and forest, it offers easy access to sailing, fishing and hiking, combined with small-town charm and a close-knit community.

Bollnäs, located inland in Hälsingland by the Ljusnan river, is a welcoming town known for its strong community spirit and family-friendly environment. It offers good schools, affordable housing and easy access to outdoor activities, with convenient connections to both Gävle and Hudiksvall.
